Stingers win sixth straight Theresa Humes Hockey Tournament

Concordia centre Corinne Swirsky scored with four minutes left in the championship game of the 30th annual Theresa Humes tournament to give the Concordia Stingers a 5-4 victory over the University of New Hampshire Wildcats before 250 fans at the Concordia Arena in Montreal on Sunday afternoon.

The goal was Swirsky's third of the game and her sixth of the tournament. She was named MVP for her solid performance throughout the tournament. She was also the MVP of the 1997 tournament when Concordia defeated the University of Toronto 7-1. Swirsky scored all seven goals in that game, which took place a year ago.

For the Stingers, it was their sixth straight tournament championship.

The victory was hardly assured in the early going. Concordia played catch-up hockey throughout the game and was trailing 4-2 two minutes into the third period.

Defenceman Geneviève Fagnan pulled the Stingers within one goal and then captain Kari Colpitts tied the game with seven minutes left to play.

Samantha Holmes was the big threat for New Hampshire. She scored two goals in the final game.
